Department of Politics & International Relations

The Department

The Department of Politics & International Relations has a reputation for excellence in teaching and research, with strengths in international relations, political theory and political economy. It has 22 permanent academic members of staff, a number of Associate Lecturers, as well as a current administrative team of 5. It currently has close to 500 BA students, 50 MA students and 20 MPhil/PhDs. Politics & International Relations hosts two Research Centres – the Political Economy Research Centre, and the Centre for Postcolonial Studies – as well as a number of smaller research units. It scores highly in teaching quality ratings – 22 out of 24 in the latest government assessments. We are currently ranked 23 in the UK for Research Intensity (REF2014). Our department has ambitious plans to expand, particularly in MA recruitment. Further details about the Politics & International Relations Department can be found at: http://www.gold.ac.uk/Politics & International Relations/

The Department of Politics & International Relations is part of the School of Culture and Society, which includes the Departments of Anthropology, Cultural Studies, Media & Communications, Politics & International Relations, Sociology and Visual Cultures. Staff have regular face to face contact with students, University staff and members of the wider academic community.
